A new rain simulation app has just been released for Windows Phone devices. The creator of the app, Razor1911, says that this is the first application for real-time rain visual effects on windows phones. The app includes 36 different types of tears and 10 different types of drops to make your phone screen look like it is raining. Features

The app is available from the Windows Phone Store for $0.99/£0.59.

Razor1911 is a small company created in 2012 which sells Windows Phone apps and games. Razor1911 has been called "the best app shop" by the British newspapers, The Guardian and The Times as well as having been featured in Forbes, Bloomberg, The Official Microsoft Blog, ZDNet and The Next Web for their contribution to the Windows Phone platform.

The RainWallpaper crack consists of a RainWallpaper App that can be installed on a device that has a resolution of 1280x720 or greater. The app uses a portion of your battery power to enable the raindrop effects. The effect is not real-time and only triggers every 20-30 minutes.

In December 2015, Razor1911 released a Windows 10 version of RainWallpaper to be used on desktops and laptops. The app is available from the Windows Store for free.

RainWallpaper was originally released in May 2012, before being pulled from the Windows Phone Store in July 2012 due to permissions issues with the app's background agent that caused phones to become unusable due to a high volume of data associated with background agent launching. Razor1911 then rewrote the application which was subsequently re-released in August 2012 for $0.99/£0. 59.

RainWallpaper for PC is rated 4.5/5 stars on the Windows Store with people saying that this app is their favourite one.

The RainWallpaper App was designed to be used on phones with 720p or higher resolution, highly recommended to use on phones with 1080p or greater resolution (e.g., Lumia 930, 1520)

Devices that have been tested with RainWallpaper: According to Razor1911, version 1.0 was not compatible with Windows Phone 8 or higher operating systems because of a bug in the platform's new notifications system. Version 1.1 was designed for phones with a resolution of 1920 x 1080 or higher and features a new interface which has been received positively by reviewers and users of the app on Windows Phone 8 and higher operating systems, although it is still not rated as one of the best apps available on the platform.
